PASSPORT SERIES

s 22(1)(a)(ii)

THE COST OF THE P-SERIES PASSPORT

The total production cost for the P-series passport is currently AUD$22.80. This is made up of AUD$9.02 for an ordinary chip booklet, AUD$7.95 for a chip (¥625 per unit based on a Budget Exchange Rate (BER) of 678.5965 in 2019-20) and AUD$5.83 for a laminate (USD$4.15 per unit based on a BER of USD$0.7120 in 2019-20). Based on a forecast issuance rate of 2.1m, the total cost amounts to approximately AUD$47.88m per annum.

The laminate used in the personalisation of the P-series passport costs USD$4.15 per unit. The move to a polycarbonate data page (with an embedded chip) will eliminate the need for a laminate, and will result in a saving in personalisation costs.

THE COST OF THE R-SERIES PASSPORT

By comparison, the total production cost for the R-series passport is expected to be in the vicinity of AUD$20.00 per unit, or a total of approximately AUD$42.000m per annum. The cost for the R-series passport is anticipated to be AUD$2.80 per unit less than the existing P-series passport.

COST OF PRODUCING AN AUSTRALIAN PASSPORT

How much does it cost to produce an Australian passport?

- . There is no single answer to that question.
- . There are different elements to a passport, its production, and delivery that would influence the cost. The cost of these elements would also vary markedly between Australian domestic locations and our posts overseas.
- . Section 5(3) of the Australian Passports (Application Fees) Act 2005 provides that ‘an application fee need not bear any relationship to the cost of issuing an Australian travel document’
 - Which means we have not had any need to settle on a particular cost model for determining fees.
- . All passport fee revenue is deposited directly into the Consolidated Revenue Fund; the Department does not retain this revenue.
 - DFAT receives a separate operating budget to manage passport production expenses via the Passport Services Funding Arrangement, a direct agreement made with the Department of Finance.

Background for Advisers:

There is no correlation between passport fees and the cost of issuing an Australian passport. Australian legislation specifies that passport fees 'need not bear any relationship to the cost of issuing an Australian travel document.'

s 22(1)(a)(ii) (Additional Estimates 187- Passports) stated 'that the average cost of providing passport services for financial year 2022–23 was around $141 per travel document. The 2022–23 captured the transition between the P Series and R Series passport.'
