AusAID Management Response

Independent Review of the Australian Political Parties for Democracy Program

The Australian Political Parties for Democracy Program (Program) was established at the initiative of Prime Minister Howard in the 2005-06 Budget and was initially managed by the Department of Finance and Administration. The Program moved to AusAID in 2009 and a number of changes were made to the Grant Agreement at that time, including that 50 per cent of the funds must be used for Official Development Assistance.

An independent review of the Program commenced in mid-August 2011 and reported in mid-September 2011. The review considered the 2009-2012 grant agreement and activities pursuant to that agreement.

The Review's two objectives were:

- To assess the developmental impact and effectiveness of program activities against program objectives, and make recommendations for improvement as appropriate; and
- To advise on possible new management structures that can both address concerns about the proximity of Australian Government involvement in the political processes of partner governments, and continue to support the Program to operate effectively.

The review made no recommendations. It did, however, comment on 12 areas including transparency, risk management, strategic engagement, performance and program management. AusAID agrees to 11 of the comments and one is noted.

Following the review, and in light of the fact that the 2009 Agreement expired on 30 June 2012, AusAID worked with political parties to negotiate a new agreement. The new clearer agreement has Program objectives which align with Australian aid policy and has simplified both funds disbursement and reporting requirements. These changes reflect the review's findings and also address the recommendations raised by an internal AusAID audit into the program.

A key outcome of the negotiations has been the agreement by parties to publish the head agreement along with an agreed summary of activities based on information drawn from work plans and activity proposals. This commenced on 1 July 2012, as part of the revised agreement, with the first report due in July 2013. This addresses the review's comments regarding the public availability of Program material.

The new agreement will run to 30 June 2015.

|   | Review comment  | AusAID response   |
|---|---|---|
| 1 | In close consultation, AusAID and parties todevelop a stronger strategic programframework that articulates the purpose of theprogram, what to engage on and how toengage.   | Agreed . AusAID and the parties havenegotiated a revised program objective: "toassist the development of political partysystems in partner countries." This objectivebetter reflects the activities that the partiesundertake.   |
| 2 | Reconsideration of the Program structure,including goals and aims of the Program andaccommodation of ODA and non-ODAstrands.  | Agreed . The Program goal, aims andsuggested list of activities are now betteraligned and are more achievable andmeasurable. The information required whensubmitting activity proposals has been revisedto reflect this under the new agreement.   |
| 3 | Develop and apply a standardisedperformance framework: "APPDP wouldbenefit from the development of a singleperformance framework to bring some internalcoherence and structure to activitydevelopment and reporting." | Agreed. The new agreement has improvedprocesses around performance monitoring:parties are to submit a monitoring andevaluation statement with their ActivityProposal, which identifies how the proposedactivities fit within the objective and aims ofthe program, what will be achieved from theactivity and how outcomes will be measured.In addition, parties are required to submit, onan annual basis, a summary detailingimplementation progress on activities andachievements towards overall programobjectives. Parties are required to also submitan implementation strategy that highlights anylessons learned and proposes alternativeapproaches if required.It is expected that these amendments willassist in outlining progress towards overalldevelopment impact.Management notes that describing theeffectiveness of outputs or cumulativecontribution to outcomes in governance-related interventions only becomes evidentover a number of years and that a long-termapproach to monitoring and evaluation isrequired.Management highlights the review'scomments in this regard: "In fairness to theparties participating in APPDP, it is widelyrecognised that it is notoriously difficult tomeasure the true impact of political partywork: while simple outputs can be described, itis harder to describe the effectiveness of theoutputs or cumulative contribution to |

| 3 |   | outcomes that will only become evident over anumber of years. Across the literature onpolitical party assistance, this emerges as acommon dilemma."  |

| 4 | <ul> <li>Utilisation of tools for effective engagement:</li> <li>needs assessment and planning;</li> <li>multi-year plans;</li> <li>multi-partisan assessment teams.</li> </ul> | Management agrees that consideration of thecountry context is important and will continueto consider how best to ensure thatappropriate country analysis is undertaken.The use of multi-party teams and multi-yearassessments is a matter that AusAID willdiscuss with the parties when consideringfuture activity proposals (see comment 8). |
| 5 | Coordination with other governance elementsin AusAID and with other donors working inthe field.   | Management agrees on importance oflinkages across activities on politicalgovernance programming and will work toensure that when considering partiesproposed activities there is alignment withbroader political governance programming in  |

| 5                           |  | the particular countries.  |
|-----------------------------|--|--|
|                             |  | As noted above, under the new agreementAusAID is to review all required reports andacquittals for compliance with the grant deedand provide formal written acceptance to theparties. A dispute resolution clause has beeninserted in the event that AusAID requiresadditional information and/or clarification. Thenew agreement maintains the requirementunder the former agreement that partiesconsult with relevant Australian missionsbefore planning and carrying out major partsof overseas activities.  |
| 6                           | Transparency: "wide disclosure coupled with astronger Program rationale should go aconsiderable way towards counteringaccusations of political interference."  | Agreed . AusAID has published programinformation, including objectives, activityguidelines and funding, on its website sinceFebruary 2011. A key outcome of thenegotiations for the new agreement has beenconsensus by parties to publish the headagreement along with an agreed summary ofactivities based on information drawn fromwork plans and activity proposals. This startedon 1 July 2012, as part of the revisedagreement, with the first report due in July2013.   |
| 7                           | Development of a risk management matrix.   | See comment 12.  |
| 8,9,10and11 | Consideration of alternate program deliveryapproaches including:• Multiparty approaches• Priority countries• Increasing in-country training; and• Embedding learning from study tours.   | For comments 8, 9, 10 and 11, AusAID notesthat it is responsible for administering theprogram and the parties are responsible fordelivering activities in accordance with theagreement. The decision on the activities thatare conducted is a matter for the parties.  |
| 12                          | <ul> <li>Program administration: independence of the program and changes to management structures.</li> <li>Review noted that "the choice of management structure is beyond the scope of this review" however it outlined a number of options to consider as well as the factors that may influence the decision making process.</li> <li>Options: <ul> <li>maintain status quo;</li> <li>involve the Centre for Democratic Institutions (CDI) in assessment of annual plans;</li> <li>establish senior reference group of officials and stakeholders</li> <li>establish an independent panel linked to AusAID;</li> <li>transfer administration of APPDP to another government department;</li> </ul> </li> </ul> | Noted. Discussions around suitablemanagement structures for the Program havetaken place previously. Having the Program'sactivities managed at some distance from agovernment agency as canvassed in thereview is consistent with other similarinternational aid programs and could assist toaddress any perceptions of direct interferenceby the Australian Government in the domesticpolitical processes of other countries. Part ofthis consideration will also reflect on what isconsidered appropriate in terms of managingrisk. AusAID will consult with parties during2012-13 on whether further change isappropriate. |

| 12 | <ul> <li>align APPDP with the management ofthe Political Exchange Program;</li> <li>merge APPDP into the AustralianElectoral Commission post-electiongrants to political parties;</li> <li>transfer administration to CDI; and</li> <li>establish a multi-party foundation.</li> </ul> Factors to consider: <ul> <li>What is the primary purpose andcharacter of the Program – is itinternational development or politicalparty work?</li> </ul> |  |
