FROM THE GOVERNOR- GENERAL

I am very proud to be Patron of the New Colombo Plan – a program which has gone from strength to strength in its first five years.

The 2019 New Colombo Plan scholars are about to embark on a remarkable journey, which will not only enhance their personal and professional futures, but will pay long-lasting dividends for our nation. The friendships and professional connections these 125 young people make in the region will be fundamental to Australia's future, helping build meaningful, two-way engagement between Australia and the Indo-Pacific.

By living, studying and working in the region, this next generation of Australian leaders will have genuine experience of our neighbourhood, and an understanding of the people and cultures of the Indo-Pacific, including, in many instances, language skills.

By 2020, the New Colombo Plan alumni will have grown to around 40,000 young Australians deeply familiar with the region, many with real-life work experience. This is a significant achievement.

I am delighted to see that these exceptional ambassadors are representative of Australian society — from across the length and breadth of our nation, with strong participation by Indigenous Australians, students from diverse linguistic and cultural backgrounds, and people with a disability.

In an increasingly complex world, it is our people who create the enduring connections for our international, relationships. I am pleased we have such a distinguished group of 2019 scholars playing this important role connecting Australia to its region. I wish you well with your endeavours.

His Excellency the Hon Sir Peter Cosgrove AK MC (Retd)

Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia

Patron of the New Colombo Plan

FROM THE FOREIGN MINISTER

I am honoured to share this special occasion with Australia's 2019 New Colombo Plan scholars.

These young Australians represent the best of our nation. A diverse group of emerging leaders from all corners of this land, from our cities to rural and regional communities. Creative and resilient high-achievers, they embody the dynamism of modern Australia.

In 2019, the New Colombo Plan will support 125 undergraduates from 37 universities to live, study and gain work experience in the Indo-Pacific.

Scholars will travel to 24 host locations in the region, including the Cook Islands, French Polynesia and Samoa, which are receiving their first New Colombo Plan scholars. I am delighted more Australian students are recognising the value of learning from our friends in the Pacific.

The New Colombo Plan's record on diversity and inclusiveness speaks for itself. In the 2019 cohort alone we welcome six Indigenous student, six students who are living with a disability, nearly one in five who are the first in their family to have attended university, and more than one in five who speak a language other than English at home. I am proud that any Australian undergraduate student — whatever their circumstances — has the opportunity to work and study in our region through the New Colombo Plan.

Next year will mark five years since scholars first ventured into the region under the New Colombo Plan. In that time, participants have benefited from valuable real-life experience of the region, helping them create deep and broad connections between Australia and the Indo-Pacific that will lie at the heart of relations for decades to come.

The business community has been a great supporter of the New Colombo Plan and is already benefiting from a new generation of graduates with cross-cultural experience, strong regional networks and a deep understanding of the Indo-Pacific. I would particularly like to thank our business sponsors for supporting a number of 2019 scholars.

A growing number of New Colombo Plan alumni are finding graduate employment as a result of the program and learning new languages.

Time and again, the New Colombo Plan has proved to be truly life-changing for its participants. I wish the New Colombo Plan 2019 scholars all the best of success as they embark on this exciting and transformational life experience.
