Introduction

Australian aid This report, Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Part 2: Official Sector Statistical Summary, 2014-15, presents statistical details of Australia's development and bilateral cooperation with partner countries, multilateral and bilateral development agencies, civil society organisations and the private sector. It provides a range of information at the aggregate level on where Australia's aid program was delivered, the type of aid delivered and Australia's engagement with developing countries.

This report complements other reporting of the Australian aid program.

Users may wish to refer to the following publications which can be downloaded from the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade website:

- Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Part 1: Bilateral Relationships at a Glance.
- Foreign Affairs and Trade Portfolio Budget Statements 2015-16.
- 2015-16 Development Assistance Budget Summary.
- Annual Report 2014-15: Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade.
- Performance of Australian Aid Report 2014-15

Changes in this issue In response to the Foreign Minister's speech at the Lowy Institute in June 2015 the statistical summary has been expanded to include all official assistance provided by Australia to developing countries. Data are now presented for Official Development Assistance (ODA) and Other Official Flows (OOF). The inclusion of OOF complements ODA reporting.

The expanded reporting is consistent with an international agenda of reporting total support, including the Organisation for Economic and Development Cooperation (OECD) Total Official Support for Sustainable Development (TOSSD). Donors are working collectively with the OECD's Development Assistance Committee (DAC) to develop this new reporting framework.

This publication is complemented by Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Part 1: Bilateral Relationships at a Glance which includes a series of fact sheets detailing Australian engagement with developing countries not limited to the official sector.

Concepts and definitions	The ODA concepts and definitions used in Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Part 2: Official Sector Statistical Summary, 2014-15 are consistent with the OECD DAC's Statistical Reporting Directives. Refer to Appendix 2: Concepts and Definitions for further details. At present there is no international framework for reporting detailed OOF. The framework presented in this publication has been developed within the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade incorporating (where known) aspects of TOSSD. The framework has been developed to track the different types of engagement including private sector leveraging; bilateral and strategic policy engagement; and peace and security.
Comparability with other donor countries	To facilitate comparability between donor countries, Australia reports annually its development assistance to the DAC, converted to United States dollars (USD) and on a calendar year basis. This includes statistical information at the activity level, which can be accessed through the DAC's web site at http://www.oecd.org/dac. Statistics in this publication are stated in Australian dollars and reported on an Australian financial year basis, unless otherwise specified. This may restrict, in some instances, a direct comparison between Australia's development cooperation and that of other donor countries.
Historical ODA data	ODA estimates for periods prior to those shown in this publication are available from the Time Series spread sheets located on the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade website http://www.dfat.gov.au/about-us/publications/aid/statistical-summary-time-series-data/Pages/statistical-summary-and-time-series-data-2014-15.aspx. The Time Series spread sheets enable users to tabulate, manipulate and analyse Australian aid data over time. A detailed list of data items for ODA is included in Australia's International Development Assistance: Standard Products and User Guide also available on the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade website. Included are explanations and definitions for each data item and how users can access the relevant data.
Future releases	Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Official Sector Statistical Summary, 2015-16. Due for release in December 2016.

Appendix 1: Explanatory Notes

Australian Engagement with Developing Countries

1. Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Part 2: Official Sector Statistical Summary 2014-15, incorporates total aid expenditure across all Australian public sector and other official flows.

This report presents statistical details of Australia's development and bilateral cooperation with partner countries, multilateral and bilateral development agencies, civil society organisations and the private sector. It provides a range of information at the aggregate level, on where Australia's aid program was delivered, the type of aid delivered and Australia's bilateral engagement with developing countries.

- 2 The statistical data in this publication are based on data extracted in December 2015.

Official Development Assistance

3. Official Development Assistance (ODA) data presented in Australian Engagement with Developing Countries Part 2: Official Sector Statistical Summary 2014-15, complies with official development assistance as defined by the DAC. Refer to Official Development Assistance in Appendix 2: Concepts and definitions for further details.

Other Official Flows

4. Other Official Flows (OOF) data presented in this publication refers to official sector transactions that do not meet ODA criteria. OOF includes:
 - grants to developing countries for representational or essentially commercial purposes;
 - official bilateral transactions intended to promote development, but having a grant element of less than 25 per cent;
 - official bilateral transactions, whatever their grant element, that are primarily export-facilitating in purpose; and
 - peacekeeping operations not considered ODA undertaken by armed forces.
5. OOF data are further disaggregated into Support for Economic Autonomy (SEA) and Other Flows. SEA refers to bilateral engagement that facilitates economic trade.

DAC Primary Purpose Classification

6. Australia's aid program has been classified according to the DAC Primary Purpose classification. As stated by the DAC this classification has been 'specifically developed to track aid flows and to permit measuring the share of each sector (e.g. health, energy, agriculture) or other purpose category "non-sector allocable aid" (e.g. general budget support, humanitarian aid) in total aid. The sector of destination is assigned by answering the question:

"Which specific area of the recipient's economic and social structure is the transfer intended to foster"'.¹

7. Australia's OOF framework has been developed within the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs (DFAT) incorporating (where known) aspects of TOSSD. The framework has been developed to track the different types of engagement including private sector leveraging; bilateral and strategic policy engagement; and peace and security.

Sources of data

Australian Aid Appropriations

8. Australian aid, appropriated as part of the Australian Aid Program, is managed through the Aid Reporting Framework. These aid resources are presented at a number of different levels.
9. The first of these levels are the main programs: Country and Regional, Global, and Departmental Expenditure. Country and Regional and Global programs are disseminated to secondary levels, referred to as elements and presented as:

Country and Regional Main Program:

- a. Individual country programs.
- b. Regional programs.
- c. Global programs.

Official Resource Flows to Developing Countries Survey

10. Australia's official support to developing countries also includes activities delivered by other public sector organisations, such as ACIAR and Other Government Departments (OGDs). These other public sector organisations participate in the delivery of activities that can be either funded by their own work programs and/or from the Australian aid appropriations.
11. DFAT conducts an Official Resource Flows to Developing Countries Survey (OFDC Survey) twice yearly to collect 'whole of government' information from Australian federal and state and territory government departments and agencies about Australia's resource flows to developing countries.

1 OECD DAC, Purpose Codes

Sources of data continued...	12. Information is collected on activities that are funded from the department's administrative and/or departmental appropriations. 13. Scope of the OFDC's Survey: By definition the OFDC Survey, includes all Australian government departments and agencies, including ACIAR and state and territory government departments and agencies. Coverage of the OFDC Survey: In the OFDC Survey, coverage rules are applied to ensure the reporting of each activity's expenditure is reported in total, without duplication across agencies. OGDs exclude activities that are funded or have expenditure reimbursed by DFAT or any other source.
Accrual accounting in the aid program	14. The Australian Government moved to an accrual accounting framework in 1999–2000. As part of that framework, Australian Government expenditure, including DFAT expenditure, is calculated on an expenses basis for internal government budgeting and expenditure purposes. 15. Refer to Accruals accounting in Appendix 2: Concepts and definitions for further details.
Rounding	16 Discrepancies may occur between totals in this publication and the same aggregates from other sources, and between sums of component items and totals due to rounding.
Further information	17 For further information about these and related statistics, contact the Statistics Section at <aidstatsinquiries@dfat.gov.au>.

Appendix 2: Concepts and Definitions

Accrual accounting

1. Accrual accounting refers to an accounting method that records financial transactions when they are incurred regardless of when cash is exchanged, that is it records flows at the time the economic value is created, transformed, exchanged, transferred or extinguished.
2. Following accrual accounting principles:
 - Flows involving change of ownership are recorded when ownership changes.
 - Services are recorded when provided.
 - Distributive transactions are recorded as amounts payable accumulate.
3. Accrual recording ensures that activities are recorded consistently and without distortion from leads and lags in accompanying cash flows. The Australian Government moved to an accrual accounting framework in 1999-2000.

NOTE: ODA is reported on a cash basis. DFAT applies an adjustment to these transactions to report transactions when they occurred. An exception is made for core payments to multilateral organisations which are recorded at the time the payment is made by DFAT to the multilateral organisations, that is these payments are recorded on a cash basis.

Australian aid programs

4. The Australian aid program is delivered through a number of programs, which are the major managerial, administrative and accounting frameworks within which Australian Government aid funds are deployed. There are three main types of aid delivery programs: Country Programs; Regional Programs; and Global Programs.

Cash payments

5. ODA is measured in terms of cash payments in a given time period, rather than expenses incurred over that period. Thus, for ODA statistics, some expenditure data needs to be adjusted from the expenses basis used in Australian Government financial records to a cash basis.
6. In particular, adjustments from expenses to cash are required in relation to expenditure to meet major multi-year liabilities such as commitments to the Asian Development Fund and International Development Association. For each financial year, these adjustments exclude the expenses recorded in relation to those commitments, but include the cash paid under those commitments in that year.
7. Adjustments are also made for such items as movements in creditors and depreciation.

Climate change marker	8. The climate change marker tracks aid in support of climate change adaptation. 9. The climate change marker indicates policy objectives in relation to each aid activity. A principal objective (mitigation or adaptation) score is given when promoting the objectives of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC). In other words, the activity would not have been funded but for that objective. Activities marked “significant” have other prime objectives, but have been formulated or adjusted to help meet climate concerns. 10. The markers allow an approximate quantification of aid flows that target climate objectives. In marker data presentations the figures for principal and significant objectives should be shown separately and the sum referred to as the “estimate” or “upper bound” of climate-change-related aid. 11. For further details refer to Handbook on the OECD-DAC climate markers, Paris: OECD, September 2011.
Co-financing	12. An arrangement under which a development activity is jointly funded by the Australian Government and a development organisation outside Australia, such as the World Bank (WB), the Asian Development Bank (ADB) or the United Nations Development Program (UNDP).
Country programs	13. The Australian aid program has a separate country program for each major partner country, which is planned and implemented jointly with the partner government. Each country program consists of an integrated package of mutually agreed activities, developed and implemented under an agreed country strategy.
Departmental expenditure	14. For any Australian Government department or agency, departmental expenditure refers to the costs of operating the organisation concerned. Departmental expenditure in the Australian aid program includes such costs as salaries, equipment costs, rent and other running expenses of the government agency responsible for administering international development cooperation.
Development Assistance Committee (DAC)	15. The main committee of the OECD on aid matters, and a key forum of major bilateral donors. The key functions of the DAC are to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> Adopt authoritative policy guidance for DAC members. Conduct periodic reviews of its Members’ development cooperation programs. Provide a forum for dialogue, exchange and the building of international consensus on aid-related policy and management issues of interest to Members. Publish statistics and reports on aid and other resource flows to developing countries and related matters, based principally on reporting by Members.

Disability
inclusion

16. Disability inclusion refers to Australian aid that provides support to people with disability to improve the quality of their lives by promoting and improving access to the same opportunities for participation, contribution, decision making, and social and economic well-being as others. Australia's disability inclusion strategy is set out in Development for all: Towards a disability-inclusive Australian aid program 2009-2014.
17. The 'Development for all' strategy primarily focuses on people with a disability and identifies the following priorities:
 - Comprehensive support for partner governments' efforts towards disability-inclusive development.
 - Focus on promoting and facilitating better access to education and to infrastructure for people with disability across the aid program.
 - Capacity development of Disabled Peoples' Organisations.
 - Fostering initiatives through a range of support programs such as volunteers, NGO agreements, research, leadership awards and scholarships, sports and small grants.
 - Strengthening leadership in disability and development.
18. Reducing preventable impairments has also been recognised as a priority in the Australian aid program and includes assistance such as targeting avoidable blindness, clearance of land mines and road safety. Programs delivered for preventive measures target the wider population and are therefore excluded from disability inclusion as they are not delivered specifically to persons with disability. Reducing preventable impairment data is also available; refer to Impairment Prevention for further details.
19. There is no internationally agreed methodology for assessing the exact share of aid activity expenditure that contributes to disability inclusion.
20. Disability inclusion data presented in this publication has been compiled using a disability inclusion marker which follows similar methodology as other DAC markers however also includes an adjustment for selected payments.
21. Due to the way in which large payments to multilateral organisations or NGOs are recorded within DFAT systems, it is necessary to apply an adjustment. These payments include the Australian NGO Cooperation Program (ANCP), development funds or grant schemes such as the Human Rights Small Grants Scheme. These payments are grouped together and recorded at the activity level; therefore it is necessary to filter records to extract only those payments to specific agencies that focus on providing assistance to disabled persons.
22. The level of assistance varies across all activities, with some activities providing a principal or significant focus and other activities providing moderate or minor focus. The focus allows an appropriate quantification of aid flows. Due to the variation in focus, caution should be exercised when interpreting disability inclusion data.
23. For details on Australian aid for the purposes of disability and impairment prevention see Impairment Prevention.

Disability prevention	24. See Impairment Prevention.
Expenses	25. See Cash payments.
Gender equality	26. Gender equality is central to economic and human development and to supporting women's rights in a country. Equal opportunity for women and men supports economic growth and helps to reduce poverty. Removing inequalities gives societies a better chance to develop. When women and men have relative equality, economies grow faster, children's health improves and there is less corruption. Gender equality is an important human right. 27. Gender equality in Australian aid data are based on the OECD gender marker whereby activities are screened and marked as either: (i) targeting gender equality as a 'principal' objective or a 'significant' objective; or (ii) not targeting the objective.
Global programs	28. Global programs are specialised DFAT programs which deliver other development assistance and/or multi-country development benefits across the developing world. They include contributions to international organisations; emergency, humanitarian and refugee programs; contributions to NGOs and volunteer programs; development education and public information; development research; and the International Seminar Support Scheme (ISSS).
Impairment prevention	29. Reducing preventable impairments is recognised as a priority in the Australian aid program and includes assistance such as targeting avoidable blindness, clearance of land mines and road safety. Programs delivered for preventive measures target the wider population and are excluded from disability inclusion as they are not delivered specifically to persons with disability. 30. Impairment prevention includes programs such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • primary health focus which if the condition is left untreated could lead to impairment or disability, such as diabetes, trachoma and iodine deficiency • mine clearance • road safety. 31. There is no internationally agreed methodology for assessing the exact share of aid activity expenditure that contributes to impairment prevention. 32. Impairment prevention data presented in this publication has been compiled using an impairment prevention marker which follows a similar methodology as other DAC markers. 33. The level of assistance varies across all activities, with some activities providing a principal or significant focus and other activities providing moderate or minor focus. The focus allows an approximate quantification of aid flows. Due to the variation in focus, caution should be exercised when interpreting impairment prevention data. 34. For details on Australian aid delivered to persons with a disability see Disability inclusion.

Maternal and Child Health	35. At the June 2012 DAC Working Party on Statistics meeting, member countries agreed to report maternal and child health (MCH) spending using a new standard methodology. The methodology assigns a score to aid activities based on the level of funding targeted to MCH. 36. The methodology differs to the tracking of family planning expenditure reported at the Family Planning Summit. The family planning methodology was devised by the United Kingdom's Department for International Development (DfID) to guide donors commitments and is based on apportioning expenditure across DAC health sectors based on analysis of DfID's spending patterns. 37. The data contained in this publication aligns to the DAC methodology where records are scored at either the activity or agreement level.
Multilateral flows	38. Resources channelled through international organisations active in development such as the WB, the ADB, the UNDP, and the World Food Program (WFP). Resources include core and non-core payments to multilateral and regional organisations and may also include payments made to third parties that for administrative purposes are channelled through multilateral and regional organisations.
Negative flows	39. Aid expenditure is usually presented as a positive cash flow to a developing country. In some situations a negative flow may be reported. Valid negative cash flows from a developing country include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Repayments of the principal of ODA loans. • Official equity investments acquired for ODA development intentions and subsequently sold; that is the proceeds from the sale are reported as a negative flow. • Reimbursements from partners for unexpensed resources. 40. Negative flows presented in this publication do not necessarily reflect an outward flow of cash being returned to Australia from a developing country. In some instances, these flows may also reflect an accounting adjustment.
Negative values	41. See Negative flows.
Net bilateral costs	42. Additional costs of providing resources to a recipient country, for example the extra cost of assigning personnel to aid activities, net of the costs of stationing them at home, and any compensation received from other parties for their relocation.
Non-core payments	43. Payments to a development organisation made with specific conditions; that is where the donor specifies any aspect of how the funds are to be used. These payments are often referred to as 'Ear-Marked'. See also Core payments.
Non-government organisations (NGOs)	44. NGOs are legally constituted organisations that operate independently from any government. Their primary purpose is to pursue activities to relieve suffering, promote the interest of the poor, protect the environment, provide basic social services or undertake community development.

development assistance
(ODA)

45. ODA, as defined by the DAC, consists of flows to countries and territories on the DAC List of ODA Recipients and to multilateral development institutions which are:
 - a. provided by official agencies, including state and local government, or by their executive agencies
 - b. each transaction of which:
 - I. is administered with the promotion of the economic development and welfare of developing countries as its main objective
 - II. is concessional in character and conveys a grant element of at least 25 per cent (calculated at a rate of discount of 10 per cent).¹
46. To ensure consistency in the application of ODA eligibility, the DAC has further delineated the boundaries of ODA in many areas, for instance:
47. Military aid: The supply of military equipment, services or anti-terrorism activities, and the forgiveness of debt incurred for military purposes are not reportable as ODA. The costs of using donors' armed forces to deliver humanitarian aid or perform development services are eligible.
48. Peacekeeping: Most peacekeeping expenditures are excluded in line with the exclusion of military costs. However, the net bilateral cost of some closely-defined development activities within United Nations (UN) administered or approved peacekeeping operations are included, such as: human rights; election monitoring; rehabilitation of demobilised soldiers and of national infrastructure; advice on economic stabilisation; monitoring and training of administrators; and weapons and mine removal for development purposes only.
49. Social and cultural programs: Expenditure on the promotion of museums, libraries, art and music schools, and sport training facilities and venues that builds developing countries capacity are reported as ODA. One-off interventions such as sponsoring concert tours or athletes' travel costs are not ODA eligible. Cultural programs in developing countries whose main purpose is to promote the culture and values of the donor are not reportable as ODA.
50. Assistance to refugees: Assistance to refugees in developing countries is reportable as ODA. Temporary assistance to refugees from developing countries arriving in donor countries is also reportable as ODA during the first 12 months of stay, and all costs associated with repatriation to the developing country of origin are also ODA.
51. Civil police work: Expenditure on police training is reportable as ODA, unless the training relates to para-military functions. The supply of donor's police services to control civil disobedience is not ODA eligible.
52. Nuclear energy: Nuclear energy provided for civilian purposes is reportable as ODA. Military applications of nuclear energy and nuclear non-proliferation activities are not ODA eligible.
53. Research: Research directly and primarily relevant to the problems of developing countries is ODA eligible.

1 OCED DAC, What is ODA?

	54. Anti-Terrorism : Activities combatting terrorism are not reportable as ODA, as they generally target perceived threats to donor, as much as to recipient countries, rather than focusing on the economic and social development of the recipient.
Other development assistance	55. Other development assistance refers to aid initiatives that cut across multiple aid sectors, which means the initiative is not mutually exclusive. Other development assistance initiatives include financial contributions to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Trust funds such as the World Bank Trust Fund which provides support for key multisector basic services. • Recovery and restoration activities such as post tsunami recovery, reconstruction and delivery of essential services. • Core support for multilateral organisations such as the Secretariat of the Pacific Commission. • Budget support to bilateral partners. 56. Other development assistance issues can also include gender, climate change, child protection, the environment and disability.
Other government departments	57. Australia's aid program includes aid activities delivered by Australian government departments other than DFAT. These organisations participate in the delivery of aid activities that can be either funded by their own appropriations and/or through the Australian aid program.
Other official flows (OOF)	58. Official sector transactions to aid-eligible countries or organisations that do not meet the ODA criteria, for example: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> a. Grants to aid recipients for representational or essentially commercial purposes. b. Official bilateral transactions intended to promote development but having a grant element of less than 25 per cent. c. Official bilateral transactions, whatever their grant element, that are primarily export-facilitating in purpose. This category includes, by definition, export credits extended directly to an aid recipient by an official agency or institution (official direct export credits). d. The net acquisition by governments and central monetary institutions of securities issued by multilateral development banks at market terms. e. Subsidies (grants) to the private sector to soften its credits to aid recipients. f. Funds in support of private investment. g. Peacekeeping operations not considered ODA (see paragraph 48 for more information).

Partial ODA

59. Some core payments to multilateral organisations are only partially reportable as ODA. For example, the table below shows the percentage of core payments to the multilateral organisation listed which can be currently be counted as ODA. The percentages can be periodically updated as the proportion of the organisation's work which benefits developing countries change over time.

Table A. Selected core payments of multilateral organisations eligible for Official Development Assistance

Multilateral organisation		Core Payments eligible as ODA %

WHO-assessed	World Health Organisation – assessed contributions.....	76

60. For a complete list refer to the Development Assistance Committee Reporting Directives, List of ODA-eligible organisations.

Partner country

61. Countries that Australia collaborates with in the delivery of aid assistance to achieve mutually agreed objectives. Australia collaborates with the partner country to develop a country program for each major country partner. See also Country program.

Programs

62. See Australian aid programs.

Regional programs

63. Specialised aid delivery programs which deliver an integrated program of Australian government activities across a region (or regions) of interest to Australia. Activities are usually planned and delivered under a single regional program strategy, and usually benefit more than one country. For aid statistics, expenditure is allocated between countries of benefit whenever identifiable.

Support for Economic Autonomy (SEA)

64. Support for Economic Autonomy (SEA) is a component of OOF, as defined within DFAT. SEA refers to bilateral engagement that facilitates economic trade that contributes to a developing country's sustainable development. The concept captures components of the 'currently yet to define' OECD DAC's Total Official Support for Sustainable Development.

Technical assistance

65. Technical assistance is classified into two categories: free-standing; and investment-related.

- a. Free-standing technical assistance comprises activities financed by a donor country whose primary purpose is to augment the level of knowledge, skills, technical know-how or productive aptitudes of the population of developing countries that is increasing their stock of human intellectual capital, and/or their capacity for more effective use of their available factor endowments.
- b. Investment-related technical assistance is defined as the financing of services by a donor country with the primary purpose of contributing to the design and/or implementation of a project or program aiming to increase the physical capital stock of a developing country. These services include consulting services, technical support, the provision of know-how linked to the execution of an investment project, and the contribution of the donor's own personnel (managers, technicians, skilled labour etc) to the actual implementation of the project.

Technical cooperation

66. See Technical assistance.
