1. Executive summary

Since 2001, the Government of Tonga (GoT) has been committed to implementing a comprehensive economic and public sector reform program. The reform program is supported by new rolling three-year Corporate Plans and a Public Financial Management (PFM) Roadmap focused on improving the performance of government and public service delivery, and strengthening PFM systems to promote the efficient use of resources.

Australia has provided support for the government's reform program under Partnership Outcome One of the Tonga Australia Partnership for Development, and in line with commitments towards 'aid effectiveness' made at Paris, Accra and Busan. Australia's aid program supports achievement of the GoT's Tonga Strategic Development Framework (TSDF) 2011-14, which provides the strategic direction to guide the work of the GoT to achieve development outcomes over its four-year term. It is envisaged that support for a more effective and efficient public sector (the core objective of Partnership Outcome One) can provide the basis for implementing policies and programs that promote sustainable improvements in living standards and ensure that service delivery reaches the poor.

To date, Australia's program of support to economic and public sector reforms (EPSR) has been relatively ad hoc, largely as a result of Tonga's political and economic environment and the need for the program to respond to the short-term needs of the GoT following a number of political and economic disruptions (civil unrest in 2006, lingering effects of the global financial crisis, a series of natural disasters, and an increasing debt burden). Tonga has recently undergone a period of significant transition including a move to democratisation in 2010 and a civil service restructure in 2011. As Tonga's new political and institutional system becomes more embedded, AusAID is seeking to adopt a strategic framework to reflect a renewed medium-term focus by the GoT and donors.

This Delivery Strategy provides a strategic framework for AusAID to better prioritise areas of support for improved economic and public sector governance in Tonga. The framework will allow AusAID to manage requests for assistance based on clear prioritisation criteria and, over time, will improve the coherence and effectiveness of Australian assistance in this area. The Delivery Strategy builds on an established program of support to the GoT based on a credible GoT-led reform program. AusAID will continue to provide assistance to the GoT in areas where there is a demonstrated commitment to reform and where the operational environment exists to enable AusAID to contribute effectively to institutional change. In particular, AusAID will support activities where the following conditions can be met:

- The activity supports achievement of the Policy Reform Matrix;
- The activity is identified within the GoT Corporate Plans and PFM Roadmap as a key priority for developing a more efficient and effective public sector;
- A readiness assessment of the partner agency is conducted before assigning long-term advisory support;
- The activity displays mutual accountability between the Government of Australia (GoA) and the GoT and, where possible, the activity is underpinned by effective inter-ministerial coordination for policy, economic governance and human resource development for overall effective economic and public sector governance;

- The activity is able to provide clear results to ensure the delivery of Australia's aid program is more efficient and effective, in line with the recommendations of AusAID's Comprehensive Aid Policy Framework.

AusAID's Economic and Public Sector Governance Delivery Strategy will focus primarily on end-of-strategy outcomes identified under four pillars. These have been developed in collaboration with senior management staff from the GoT during a Theory of Change workshop held in Tonga in March 2013 and are loosely based on the four enabling themes of the TSDF. The four pillars and end-of-strategy outcomes are:

- Public sector governance – GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the efficiency of public service delivery. This pillar focuses on strengthening the capacity and operating environment of the Tonga public service. In particular, AusAID will provide support for public sector reform programs aimed at promoting capacity development (including engaging with regional agencies such as PICPA) and ensuring better human resource planning. AusAID will work increasingly through donor partners, such as the World Bank and ADB, where AusAID funds are able to lever further results through expanding partner programs in Tonga.
- Economic and financial governance – GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the allocation and use of public expenditure for TSDF priorities as well as sustainable revenue collection. This pillar seeks to ensure that strengthened public financial management will contribute to improved service delivery. It is envisaged that a joint Policy Reform Matrix, agreed to by the GoT and donors, will continue to provide the cornerstone for AusAID's program in support of economic and public sector reforms in Tonga. AusAID's support in this area will be targeted at four core areas:
 - Supporting the GoT to improve the quality and management of expenditure, (including linking corporate plans, the TSDF and the medium-term budget framework) through technical assistance;
 - Supporting GoT efforts to improve revenue policy and administration through technical assistance and funding agreements to upgrade to the GoT's management information systems;
 - working with central agencies, including the Ministry of Finance and National Planning (MoFNP), Public Service Commission (PSC) and Audit Office, to improve public sector procurement practices and strengthen audit capacity. These two areas of Tonga's public financial management system have been identified in a 2011 Assessment of National Systems as requiring further strengthening before AusAID would consider greater use of these systems;
 - working with the Statistics Department to improve national statistics with a view to generating more timely and accurate information for economic planning and monitoring.

- Business enabling environment – The majority of public enterprises reform and GoT agencies enable measureable development of the private sector. AusAID will continue to support public enterprise reform and promote improvements in the business environment through the provision of conditional and targeted budget support tied to achievement of reforms identified in the Policy Reform Matrix. AusAID will continue to provide support for private sector development (including measures to strengthen competition and promote foreign investment) through regional programs such as the ADB's Private Sector Development Initiative (PSDI).
- Effective aid through alignment, harmonisation and mutual accountability – GoT agencies and development partners ensure a more coordinated whole of government approach to partnership for PFM reforms. The Policy Reform Matrix will provide an effective mechanism for a coordinated policy dialogue between the GoT and donor partners. This will be reinforced by regular communication and improved monitoring arrangements (including working to develop a shared body of evidence) between the GoA and GoT.

In addition to delivering support for economic and public sector reforms, Australia will provide assistance to improve Tonga's political and institutional environment. In 2013, AusAID introduced a four-year governance strengthening program aimed at ensuring a more accountable, responsive and effective government. This is provided in collaboration with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and Australian Electoral Commission (AEC).

It is envisaged that a total program budget of $30 million over four financial years will be provided in accordance with this Delivery Strategy. This will include: $6.5 million in TA and other capacity support programs, $3.5 million for a governance strengthening program; and $20 million in performance-linked aid. AusAID's Economic and Public Sector Governance Program will be managed primarily from Nuku'alofa Post by a Senior Program Manager and Program Manager and overseen by the First Secretary. The Tonga Desk in Canberra will provide a dedicated resource, expected to be the Desk-based economist, to assist with program management and monitoring.

Measures to mitigate key fiduciary risks for AusAID funds will include: short-term technical assistance to provide intensive and regular monitoring of AusAID funds (including an annual sample audit of procurement transactions below TOP 3,000); participation in World Bank-led biannual Policy Reform Matrix monitoring missions, and: a requirement for the GoT to produce timely acquittals of AusAID budget support funds.

A key aspect of AusAID's activities in this sector will be increased cooperation and coordination with development partners. AusAID will seek to ensure that the Economic and Public Sector Governance Program is provided in the most effective and efficient way possible by drawing from a sound evidence-base and the lessons learnt from a series of reviews conducted in this sector.

2. Tonga's economic and public sector governance development context

A key priority area of the Tonga Australia Partnership for Development is economic and public sector governance. Priority Outcome One of the Partnership identifies 'a more efficient and effective public sector' as a basis for implementing policies and programs that promote sustainable improvements in living standards and that ensure that service delivery reaches the poor. It is the responsibility of government to ensure that policies and programs are fiscally sustainable, strategically targeted on the core development priorities, and implemented in the most cost-effective manner.

While Tonga has already achieved high standards against most of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), particularly in the areas of health, education and environmental sustainability, the challenge confronting the Government is to ensure that those achievements are not only sustained, but that they are harnessed as a platform to further improve living standards.

Economic context

Tonga has a highly centralised economy with administrative capacity constraints across the public and private sector that affect implementation and service delivery. A significant proportion of the national budget is allocated to wages and salaries, with little left for maintenance and development. The economy is highly vulnerable to external shocks and has been slow to recover from a series of crises in recent years, including civil unrest in 2006, the 2009 Global Financial Crisis (GFC) and a series of natural disasters in 2009. The private sector is small and unlikely to grow in the short to medium term and Tonga's growth prospects as a result are limited. In this environment, the immediate fiscal outlook is highly constrained and the Government of Tonga (GoT) may need to implement its policies with less financial resources than planned. This underlines the fundamental importance of ensuring the Government's expenditure program carefully targets development priorities, that wastage and inefficiencies are eliminated, and that revenue services are as effective as possible. It also requires a responsive and appropriately skilled and focused public sector. The GoT has begun a fiscal consolidation program to ensure greater macroeconomic stability in the medium-term. However, this will require ongoing support from donor partners to reduce further pressure on cash resources.

The public sector is the main service provider and delivery agent in Tonga. It is also the primary employer in the country. The public sector in Tonga is relatively complicated with a historically greater level of political interest in the type of assistance which should be provided. There has been a strong working relationship between AusAID and the Ministry of Finance and National Planning (MoFNP), including strengthening its role in coordinating assistance in the public sector area.

Political and institutional environment

Since the Tonga Australia Partnership for Development was negotiated and signed in 2009, the political and economic environment in Tonga has changed considerably. In late 2010, Tonga transitioned from an executive monarchy to a modern parliamentary democracy. The first democratically elected government was formed in early 2011. Further significant political reform is unlikely in the immediate term, however a number of ministerial reshuffles and a vote of no-confidence (that did not pass) in mid-2012 indicate a level of fragility in the new Government. National elections, to be held in Tonga in 2014, have also injected a level of uncertainty in the reform program and will require a renewed commitment to reforms by the new Government. Despite the prospect of change, it is envisaged that the foreseeable future will see Tonga establishing and building on the accountability, transparency and democratic measures undertaken to date. This is still a new process and will take some time for both Government and constituents to become accustomed to. AusAID will continue to monitor the political environment through participation in World Bank-led dialogue with Government and through annual Partnership for Development talks to ensure that the operational environment is in place for activities to contribute to institutional change.

In 2011, the GoT initiated a major restructure of its civil service aimed at rationalising the public service and ensuring that the structure of government was suitable to deliver the demands placed on the newly elected government. The first phase of the restructure involved a whole-of-government restructuring process built on functional-based ministries (consolidated from 26 to 13) and separation of power. The restructure added a level of uncertainty, in late 2011, to the aid program operating environment and has precipitated the need to reassess Australia's program in the sector. In November 2013, the Governments of Australia and Tonga will be negotiating a new five-year Partnership for Development. It is envisaged that economic and public sector governance will remain a core priority of the Partnership.

GoT has been pursuing a program of economic and public sector reform since 2001. This process has gained momentum since 2009 and there is sufficient evidence to support the view that GoT is taking its reform program seriously. This can be found in the fact that:

- Tonga has successfully transitioned from a constitutional monarchy to a democratically-elected governance system;
- GoT has successfully implemented the first phase of a whole-of-government restructuring process built on functional-based ministries and separation of power and aimed at rationalising the public service;
- GoT's ratings for most indicators on the World Bank's PEFA assessment have improved since 2007¹;
- GoT has already undertaken a wide range of public sector and economic reforms including: a comprehensive review of its tax policy and administration; concrete steps to improve its business environment, and; significant work to move its public enterprises onto a more commercial footing, and;
- In 2012 and 2013, the World Bank and AusAID provided budget support to the GoT upon achievement of actions identified in the joint Policy Reform Matrix (for financial years 2011/12 and 2012/13).

A 2011 Assessment of National Systems in Tonga found that reforms had been government-led (with assistance from donors), were relevant, effectively sequenced, and had succeeded in creating some internal demand for change. This provides a sound basis for Australia to continue providing assistance in this area. The ANS notes that the GoT's PFM reform program is credibly placed to deliver further improvements. However, political will and leadership skills (particularly at Prime Minister, Ministry of Finance and CEO level) will be needed to sustain and build on the reforms that have commenced. The implementation of further reform initiatives is unlikely to be swift and will need consistent commitment from GoT and realistically-paced support from donors.

Strategic framework

The Tonga Strategic Development Framework 2011-14 (TSDF) provides the strategic direction to guide the work of the GoT to achieve development outcomes over its four year term. AusAID's engagement in economic and public sector governance (EPSG) aims to draw on the GoT's TSDF, in line with Australia's commitments towards aid effectiveness made at Paris, Accra and Busan. AusAID will continue to align its EPSG program with the strategies and targets identified in the TSDF. This includes support for the TSDF's four enabling themes. These are:

- continuing progress to a more efficient and effective government by focusing on its core functions;
- improving the macro-economic environment and fiscal management, including effective revenue services to ensure a level playing field and that services to the people can be effectively funded;
- ensuring Public Enterprises are sustainable and accountable and, where appropriate, moved into the private sector; and
- ensuring a more coordinated whole of government approach in Tonga's partnership with development partners.

In 2013, with Pacific Financial Technical Assistance Centre (PFTAC) assistance, GoT released a PFM Roadmap focused on improving the performance of government and public service delivery, and strengthening public financial management (PFM) systems to promote the efficient use of resources. The Roadmap draws on key weaknesses identified in the 2010 Public Expenditure and Financial Accountability (PEFA) assessment and proposes actions to address gaps and ensure that a comprehensive and integrated process of reform is underway. The Roadmap feeds into rolling three-year Corporate Plans produced within each ministry. Both the Roadmap and the Corporate Plans will be central to AusAID's pipeline programming for this sector.

3. Australia's current support for economic and public sector governance

AusAID support to economic and public sector governance in Tonga currently comprises performance-linked aid, long-term technical advisory support and direct funding to the GoT for specific public sector reform projects.

Without an overarching strategy to guide AusAID's approach to supporting economic and public sector governance much of the assistance provided to Tonga has been ad hoc with Australia responding to individual requests from the GoT. Australia has been the only donor willing and able to fund long-term advisory support². Tonga also approaches Australia to pay the salary of in-line positions, particularly when the GoT recruits Australian citizens to fill those roles. On a number of occasions Australia has been approached to fund salaries only after recruitment has been undertaken. A key aim of this Delivery Strategy is to provide a strategic framework to guide AusAID's engagement in economic and public sector governance.

Performance linked-aid

In 2011, development partners engaged in a coordinated economic policy dialogue with the GoT, led on behalf of development partners by the World Bank. This has involved working with the GoT to define and sequence a medium-term reform agenda focused on much needed economic and fiscal reforms to stimulate Tonga's economic recovery. The resulting Policy Reform Matrix has provided a focus for GoT and donors on key priorities. Linking budget support, in the form of performance linked aid incentive grant payments, to the achievement of policy reforms has become a cornerstone of Australia's approach to supporting Tonga's economic and public sector governance reforms.

AusAID works closely with the World Bank in recognition of the bank's comparative advantage to address economic and fiscal reform issues, and in response to Tonga's request for greater coordination among donors. Australia and the World Bank have linked the disbursement of separate budget support payments to the achievement of the same set of government priority reforms. AusAID's budget support program is provided in coordination with the World Bank's Tonga Public Finance and Structural Reform Operation³. As such, AusAID is able to draw on the World Bank's analysis of Tonga's macro-economic circumstances. AusAID's Pacific economists work closely with the World Bank's technical experts to assess reform achievement. In 2012 and 2013, based on Tonga achieving its reform benchmarks, AusAID disbursed $5 million of performance-linked aid as sector budget support for health and education worker salaries.

Technical assistance

Australian technical assistance (TA) for economic and public sector governance is currently provided to four core public sector line agencies: the MoFNP, Ministry of Revenue (MoR), Public Services Commission (PSC), and the Statistics Department. An assessment of whether this mix of ministries and the type of assistance required to each ministry is the most effective and appropriate has been undertaken as part of a review of the economic and public sector reform (EPSR) program. The review found that the mix of ministries was relevant to the objectives of the Partnership for Development and the Policy Reform Matrix. However, the review noted that, given significant capacity constraints in the department, a more detailed assessment of the Statistics Department should be undertaken before any further assistance (in particular technical assistance) is provided to ensure that assistance will provide lasting results.

Technical assistance in this sector has been supporting key areas of Tonga's reform program. However, its contribution to capacity development remains difficult to assess. Many adviser positions operate in isolation with limited or no national counterparts and, as such, have made limited progress in capacity building. TA requests are still ad hoc and are not linked to a coherent PFM Roadmap. In order to better coordinate advisory support and avoid duplication, donors have developed a TA matrix in parallel with the Policy Reform Matrix. This draws a clearer alignment between the work being undertaken by advisers and the achievement of reforms identified in the Matrix.

The 2013 review of AusAID's economic and public sector reform program noted a high level of political interest in Tonga's public service. Many adviser positions have been working in politically charged environments and, on a number of occasions, advisers have been drawn away from their ToRs to respond to requests from senior levels of Government. This has resulted in the sector requiring a high level of management attention at Post and in Canberra, as AusAID has been drawn directly into politically sensitive areas and is in regular dialogue with the Government concerning the development benefits advisors can provide when working in these circumstances. This remains a risk under this Delivery Strategy, which

AusAID will seek to mitigate through clearly-defined ToRs and stronger performance management arrangements between Post and advisers (discussed in Section 6D).

Despite the concerns raised above, the Tonga Program has assessed that, if managed correctly, technical advisory support will continue to provide a relevant and targeted approach to addressing Tonga's ongoing capacity constraints. As noted in the 2013 review, capacity development will take time and expectations will need to be realistic about what can be achieved through individual advisory support.

To date, there has been limited consideration of other forms of assistance other than TA or funding of specific positions. A Theory of Change Workshop conducted for this Delivery Strategy in March 2013, with senior management staff from the GoT, identified alternative avenues for support in this area, including introducing training programs, providing opportunities for work attachments, and offering regional staff exchange opportunities. Between 2008 and 2012, AusAID provided opportunities for work attachments for senior management staff from the Tongan public service (primarily PSC) through the Pacific Governance Partnership with the Australian Public Service Commission. An independent progress report for the Partnership noted that, whilst the program had strengthened individuals' professional capabilities, there was limited evidence that participation in the program could be linked to wider positive impacts on public administration or reform. AusAID will undertake a more detailed assessment of alternative modalities to assess where Australia's aid has the capacity to make the greatest difference. Should AusAID consider further use of work attachments, we will ensure that individual work projects are aligned with and support agency plans, and there are mechanisms in place to enable participants to apply and share the knowledge and experience accrued through the program.

Direct funding agreements

AusAID has provided support for public service training and various public sector reform projects primarily through Accountable Cash Grant (ACG) agreements with the PSC. This support has helped provide stability to the GoT during a critical period of transition and has been consistent with the long term goal of delivering aid through partner government systems. However, a number of concerns were raised in AusAID's 2013 review of the economic and public sector reform program with regard to the effectiveness and efficiency of the modality used. As funding agreements draw to a close, AusAID's review of the EPSR program recommended AusAID consider alternative modalities.

Performance review

This Delivery Strategy has been informed by the findings and recommendations of a number of recent reviews conducted of both the economic and public sector reform program and the GoT's reform agenda. These include: 2010 and 2011 reviews of in-line and advisory support in Tonga, a 2011 PFTAC review of GoT revenue administration, the 2011 Tonga Assessment of National Systems, a 2013 review of the economic and public sector reform program, and a 2013 AusAID-funded procurement review.

In 2010, a review of adviser positions for Tonga, conducted as part of a broader review of Pacific advisers, recommended capping the number of advisers to ten to ensure efficiency of the program. The 2010 review confirms the need for clear guiding principles for engagement of advisers in the future, including more strategic approaches to identifying and assessing where advisors will have the most impact, improved monitoring and evaluation systems and increased focus on capacity development and succession planning for in-line positions. These recommendations are addressed as part of this Delivery Strategy.

In 2011, at the GoT's request, the Pacific Financial Technical Assistance Centre (PFTAC) undertook a review of revenue administration. The review identified that ongoing advisory assistance would be required to support the GoT's restructure of this core area. This is likely to involve, but not be limited to, the areas of customs and tax administration. AusAID will continue to work with the MoR and other development partners to ascertain how Australia can best assist Tonga to improve its revenue administration efforts. This will require us to consider options other than TA that may be more efficient or have a greater capacity to make a difference. This will include working to improve the information technology system, which is identified in the review of revenue administration as a key strategic priority.

A 2013 review of AusAID's EPSR program found that, in the absence of an overarching framework to guide AusAID's approach to economic and public sector reform, much of the assistance provided to the GoT had been ad hoc and lacked strategic direction. This was considered largely the result of Tonga's political and economic environment and the need for the program to respond to the short-term needs of the GoT following a number of political and economic disruptions. As Tonga's new political and institutional system becomes more embedded, the evaluation recommended that AusAID develop a strategic framework for the EPSR program to reflect a renewed medium-term focus by GoT and donors. This is a key aim of this Delivery Strategy and will guide the future program pipeline in this area. A key lesson learned from the review was the need for effective performance management of advisers in order to reduce the burden of adviser issues on Post. This lesson has been addressed as part of this Delivery Strategy.

In March 2013, AusAID funded a review of the public procurement system in Tonga. The review team found that, with the assistance of AusAID, Tonga has taken important steps in developing a modern public procurement system, in particular the enactment of regulations and establishment of institutional and organisational frameworks. However, the review team identified many remaining challenges that will require both improved and sustained commitment by the GoT, and further technical assistance. This included a lack of capacity and skills in the MoFNP's Procurement Division and in the procurement units of line ministries, and repeated cases of non-compliance with procurement regulations. The team recommended that the GoT adopt a strategic and comprehensive Procurement Reform Action Plan to address the principles currently limiting development and implementation of the public procurement system. The team also identified further risk mitigation measures around AusAID use of Tongan procurement systems, which will be actioned. The GoT has recognised the need for an Action Plan to be adopted by Cabinet resolution. This has been included in the Policy Reform Matrix as a trigger for budget support in 2013. Support to assist GoT implement and deliver on its Action Plan will be a critical element of this Delivery Strategy.

Many of the activities proposed in this Delivery Strategy, including a series of policy actions in the area of public financial management, directly address the recommendations of a 2011 AusAID-sponsored Assessment of National (financial, procurement and audit) Systems (ANS). The ANS notes that there is moderate level of fiduciary and corruptions risks associated with using partner government systems in Tonga. Key fiduciary risks are identified in relation to budget credibility, policy-based budgeting and audit. These risks will be addressed in the EPSG program through direct risk mitigation measures including measures to strengthen audit capacity and to promote a program of audit for GoT – particularly for AusAID-funded programs.

4. Theory of change

The objective of this Delivery Strategy is to provide a medium-term framework to help strengthen GoT systems to deliver development results. The Delivery Strategy encompasses all of AusAID's activities in support of Outcome One of the Tonga Australia Partnership for Development.

AusAID recognises the need to improve the current strategic focus of support in economic and public sector governance in Tonga so that support is clearly linked to measurable targets and results. The Delivery Strategy aims to focus Australia's support and make it more coherent and improve reporting of results being achieved through Australian support.

a. Theory of change workshop

On March 26 and 27 2013, AusAID staff, GoT ministry officials and other stakeholders participated in a workshop to develop a robust, clear and logical theory of change for the Delivery Strategy. The theory of change aims to identify where Australia's aid interventions can best contribute to the development outcomes identified in the TSDF and Partnership for Development.

The workshop used root cause analysis (RCA) to test the consensus amongst the participants around the nature, scope, causes and consequences of the development challenges in EPSG. The consensus RCA is presented in Annex 5. This RCA was used to identify workshop participant perceptions of the capacity of Australian aid to contribute to EPSG reform through the Delivery Strategy. The consensus RCA:

- confirms the relevance of priorities identified in the PFM Roadmap and the Policy Reform Matrix;
- confirms that there are causes of EPSG issues that can only be sensibly dealt with by Tongan stakeholders – for example 'limited consequences for inconsistent use of Public Enterprises Act'; and
- identifies some new areas where donors could make a contribution – for example supporting more effective communication of complex PFM and statistical information for senior decision makers in the Legislative Assembly and Cabinet, as well as supporting audit, statistical and procurement functions.

The workshop identified four agreed end-of-strategy outcomes which help define success for this Delivery Strategy. A series of intermediate outcomes have also been identified that can be reported on through program performance management and AusAID quality processes (this is presented schematically in Annex 6). These outcomes are not additional to, but rather contribute to, on-going efforts supported by other donors and the GoT under the Policy Reform Matrix.

b. End-of-strategy outcomes

This Delivery Strategy builds on an established program of support to the GoT based on a credible GoT-led reform program. AusAID will continue to provide assistance to the GoT in areas where there is a demonstrated commitment to reform and where the operational environment exists to enable AusAID to contribute effectively to institutional change.

Australia's engagement in support of economic and public sector governance in Tonga will be provided under four key pillars: public sector governance; economic and financial governance; business enabling environment, and; effective aid through alignment, harmonisation and mutual accountability. These pillars are loosely aligned with the four enabling themes of the GoT's TSDF.

The four end-of-strategy outcomes (under each of the four pillars), and the rationale underpinning each, are identified below.

Tonga's public service faces a number of capacity constraints common to small island developing states (SIDS), including a small pool of competent professionals and a high rate of emigration resulting from the global demand for skilled labour. Tonga has historically faced major challenges in the management of its wage bill (leading the GoT to implement a partial hiring freeze since 2011). While wage increases have played a major part in driving expenditure increases, weak human resource planning and inadequate central-agency control over recruitment by some agencies has led to unchecked expansion in the number of civil service positions.

This end-of-strategy outcome seeks to address these issues by focusing on strengthening capacity development and improving human resource planning. Capacity development is focused on building the competencies and capabilities of the Tongan public service, with a view to generating sustained and self-generating performance improvement. In particular, Australia will support on-going efforts by the GoT and other donors to strengthen management of the public sector wage bill and strengthen the capacity, operating environment and motivation of the Tonga public service to implement Corporate Plans that operationalise actions given priority in the TSDF, Policy Reform Matrix and PFM Roadmap. This support will build on the achievements made to date, with the help of AusAID, and the long-standing relationship between AusAID and both the PSC and MoFNP.

2) Economic and financial governance – GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the allocation and use of public expenditure for TSDF priorities as well as sustainable revenue collection.

The growth of Tonga's economy has been limited by a small revenue base, limited economic development opportunities and vulnerability to shocks, as well as by inconsistent and inefficient revenue collection. The Global Financial Crisis, a series of recent natural disasters, and significant external debt service obligations, have also placed further pressure on Tonga's already-tight fiscal space. The GoT has had a mixed record of success in aligning budget resources with TSDF priorities⁴ and there is significant scope to improve the quality and management of expenditure, including linking corporate plans, the TSDF and the medium-term budget framework (MTBF). This will require both a commitment to improved expenditure prioritisation as well as a strengthening of budget credibility. AusAID will continue to monitor progress in this area through policy dialogue and participation in World Bank missions to ensure that activities are supported by an on-going commitment to reform by the GoT.

This end-of-strategy outcome seeks to develop an environment for strengthened public financial management to contribute to improved service delivery. It is envisaged that the Policy Reform Matrix will provide a basis for sound and targeted policy reform in this area. AusAID will provide direct support to areas where there is the greatest capacity for Australian aid to make a difference and where there is a credible commitment to reform by the GoT.

3) Business enabling environment – The majority of public enterprises reform and GoT agencies enable measureable development of the private sector.

Tonga's business enabling environment is relatively weak, with the country placed 62nd on the World Bank's Doing Business Report in 2013. Inefficient public enterprises have placed significant pressure on public expenditure and have diverted limited public sector funds from expenditure on TSDF priorities. Implementation of the Public Enterprises Act is generally inconsistent. Existing business licensing arrangements in Tonga are onerous and discourage private sector development and foreign investment. A 2013 ADB Private Sector Assessment of Tonga notes that much more needs to be done to address constraints to private sector growth and development.

This end-of-strategy outcome seeks to: ensure that public enterprises are sustainable and accountable (and where appropriate moved to the private sector), and; reduce private sector development constraints by identifying barriers to investment and entrepreneurship that raise transaction costs, discourage investment and hinder the formation and growth of businesses. AusAID will continue to support key reforms to Tonga's business enabling environment through the Policy Reform Matrix, including promoting reforms of SOEs, of the energy sector and of the business environment (to strengthen competition and promote foreign investment). Australia's support in this area will build on recent GoT efforts to strengthen the regulatory framework for public enterprises (including bringing public enterprises' accounts up to date and making audited accounts of public enterprises publicly available in line with a new requirement enacted as part of recent legislative reforms). AusAID will continue to monitor progress on this outcome through policy dialogue and participation in World Bank missions to ensure that reforms are supported to achieve institutional change.

⁴ Whilst the GoT has been successful in maintaining allocations to priority and economic sectors in the budget, this has been somewhat undermined by variances between actual and budgeted expenditure between ministries and between inputs and sub-programs within individual ministries (in some sectors, there has been evidence of a bias in in-year transfers towards lower-quality spending).

4) Effective aid through alignment, harmonisation and mutual accountability – GoT agencies and development partners ensure a more coordinated whole of government approach to partnership for PFM reforms.

Australia is committed to delivering more effective aid under the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness (2005), Accra Agenda for Action (2008) and the Busan Partnership for Effective Development Cooperation (2011). Good public sector governance in practice is demonstrated through effective performance assessment and mutual accountability in program implementation. This end-of-strategy outcome seeks to promote greater partnership between the GoA and the GoT, including by ensuring that flows of development assistance are managed more effectively and that a shared body of evidence is developed to support partnership decisions.

c. Principles to guide future EPSG investments

This Delivery Strategy aims to draw focus around key priorities where there is a capacity for Australia to make a difference and to effect institutional change. This depends on:

- The environment in which GoT agencies operate and the extent to which the support from donors, including AusAID, can influence that environment in order to contribute to end-of-strategy outcomes;
- The organisational motivation of GoT agencies, including the history and culture of the agency as well as the incentives and trade-offs for individuals, groups and the organisation to change; and
- The organisational capacity, including the capacity to adapt and the capacity to generate development results.

Under the four proposed end-of-strategy EPSG outcomes, AusAID will support activities where the following conditions can be met:

- The activity is necessary – The activity should be identified within the GoT Corporate Plans and PFM Roadmap as a key priority for developing a more efficient and effective public sector.
- The activity is the right solution – The activity should be aligned with the TSDF and should support achievement of the Policy Reform Matrix. AusAID will consider the environment in which GoT agencies operate to ensure that activities are both politically feasible and are likely to achieve desired end-of-strategy outcomes.
- The activity can be implemented and/or managed on an on-going basis by GoT agencies – A readiness assessment of the partner agency should be conducted before assigning long-term advisory support or other capacity development approaches, ensuring that:

- There is a baseline competency and functional assessment conducted as part of assessing which capacity development approach will deliver the impact expected;
 - There is at least one appropriate counterpart (preferably more) assigned time and space to engage with an adviser for the duration of the assignment; and
 - Advisers and related human resource development activities contribute to structured approaches for human resource development in counterpart ministries.
- The activity will be supported – The activity should display mutual accountability between GoA and GoT; and, where possible, the activity should be underpinned by effective inter-ministerial coordination for policy, economic governance and human resource development for overall effective economic and public sector governance. This ensures that the targeted public sector agencies have the necessary support to institutionalise the proposed changes, including levels of recurrent funding which allow the agency to deliver programs in its corporate plan.
 - The activity provides benefits for stakeholders – The activity should be able to provide clear results to ensure the delivery of Australia’s broader aid program is more efficient and effective, in line with the recommendations of AusAID’s Comprehensive Aid Policy Framework.

d. The role Tonga’s development partners are playing in the change process

There are relatively few development partners providing direct support in favour of economic and public sector reform in Tonga. Efforts to coordinate development partner engagement around a joint Policy Reform Matrix have been successful and engagement with the GoT on reform priorities has been led by the World Bank. The Bank represents all donors providing budget support by participating in Budget Support Management Committee (the primary mechanism for formal dialogue regarding selection of and monitoring progress against policy actions) meetings. By providing a single point of contact between donors and Government, the Policy Reform Matrix has helped reduce the strain of coordination on Government and reflected the strength of economic policy dialogue between the Bank and the Government. The Asian Development Bank (ADB), AusAID, the European Union and PFTAC are all providing assistance to the achievement of the proposed program of policy reforms through varying combinations of budget support and technical assistance. AusAID engages at the technical and strategic level to ensure Australia’s priorities are represented in joint policy discussions and in monitoring missions to assess progress against agreed reforms. A map of the key PFM reforms supported by GoT and donor partners is provided at Annex 7.

The World Bank has worked closely in Tonga with the IMF and shares a common view on key macroeconomic and structural reform priorities. The Bank participated in the last four IMF Article IV missions, facilitating the discussion on fiscal policy and structural reform, and works with the IMF to prepare an annual Debt Sustainability Analysis. The IMF has been actively engaged in economic and public sector reform in Tonga through PFTAC, providing short-term TA in support of the Policy Reform Matrix. This has resulted, for instance, in the recent AusAID-funded Review of Revenue Administration, at GoT's request.

AusAID has been able to lever the comparative advantage of the World Bank through the regional Pacific Facility 3 Trust Fund (PF3). PF3 is a multi-donor fund managed by the World Bank on behalf of the contributing development partners, AusAID and NZ-IDG. The PF3 aims to create an environment conducive to generating growth and employment opportunities. Since 2005, the PF3 has provided technical and advisory assistance to directly support achievement of the Policy Reform Matrix. It is envisaged that AusAID will continue to support the Bank to provide similar technical and advisory assistance through the forthcoming PF4 (ten-year) initiative.

The ADB has also been a key player in supporting Tonga's public sector reforms, focusing on comprehensive PFM and public enterprise reforms through loans and technical assistance projects. ADB support has included: extensive TA provided for corporate planning and medium-term budgeting programs; ongoing TA to assist in preparing budget documents; PSDI assistance provided to the Ministry of Public Enterprise (MoPE) on public enterprise reform; and PSDI support to Ministry of Commerce to inform policy decisions, prepare legislative revisions and draft new legislation.

e. Policy dialogue

Policy dialogue has been an ongoing and central component of the EPSR program through annual Partnership for Development talks, regular contact between Tonga Post and GoT central agencies, and dialogue between donors and the GoT through the policy matrix process. The GoT provides the strategic direction, appropriate resource allocation and performance management to ensure that assistance provided maximises the impact on Tonga's reform efforts. Australia will continue to engage with the GoT to ensure joint ownership and effectiveness of EPSG activities in line with the principles and objectives of the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness.

The Policy Reform Matrix provides a solid platform for donors to engage in substantial policy dialogue with the GoT. This ensures that reforms are contributing to positive outcomes for Tonga and that the impact on development and poverty reduction is maximised. An internal review of the Pacific Policy Matrices is currently underway in the Pacific Division. This review will enable programs around the region to be structured in the most effective way to contribute to productive policy dialogue and successful outcomes. Experience in Tonga is that budget support has acted as a good incentive to maintain steady progress on reforms.

Policy dialogue is most effective when there is a shared body of evidence. A critical area of focus for AusAID, moving forward, will be working with GoT partners to design and implement a systematic collection of information on the performance of the EPSG program in Tonga. Data collected can then be analysed, with the resulting information used to influence decisions for the continuous improvement of EPSG reform in Tonga. This could include both monitoring activities and evaluative research and should be negotiated at the design phase.

f. Supporting cross-cutting aid issues

This Delivery Strategy is underpinned by a number of key cross-cutting issues. The following Australian aid program strategies and policies will guide the design and implementation of activities within the EPSG program:

- Promoting opportunities for all—Gender equality and women's empowerment
- Development for All: Towards a disability-inclusive Australian aid program 2009–2014
- Child Protection Policy 2013
- AusAID Effective Governance Thematic Strategy 2011
- AusAID Governance Performance Assessment Framework

In line with AusAID's gender policy, gender issues will be addressed at the initiative level. AusAID will seek to implement Australia's commitments to gender equality in all aspects of program development and delivery including through engagement in policy development, program implementation and consultation. A 2013 Tonga Gender Plan Design Mission recommended that the Tonga Program work with a gender specialist to review designs and support gender-sensitive M&E frameworks, data collection (including sex disaggregated data) and analysis, reporting and communications. It is envisaged that working with a gender specialist will provide an opportunity for gender considerations to be integrated across the full scope of EPSG activities.

AusAID will ensure that gender considerations are reflected in agreements with donor partners and (where relevant) with managing contractors. This will include ensuring that: references to gender equality and gender impact are included in adviser ToRs; gender reporting is integrated into adviser assessments (therefore encouraging advisers to consider the gender impact of their roles); and gender response is integrated into capacity building training programs.

Disability considerations will be integrated across the EPSG program, ensuring that people with a disability are: consulted as part of the design phase; adequately catered for in program designs, and; recognised in reporting arrangements. As part of the Tonga Governance Strengthening Program, AusAID will ensure that people with a disability are given equitable access to opportunities, including during general elections. AusAID will also require that materials for civic education are made disability-accessible. Design documents will need to consider whether EPSG activities influence service delivery improvements for people with a disability.

AusAID will ensure that all AusAID staff and implementing agencies (advisers, consultants, donor partners) adhere to AusAID's Child Protection Policy. As part of AusAID's due diligence framework, all multilateral organisations and partners are expected to act in accordance with the principles set out in the policy and abide by other relevant international declarations, conventions and agreements.

AusAID's support for cross-cutting themes is aligned with a key objective of the GoT's TSDF. Outcome One of the TSDF commits the Government to developing strong inclusive communities, including improving gender equality by implementing the Government's gender development policy. AusAID will continue to encourage the GoT, at annual Partnership for Development talks, to pursue policies and programs that take into account the needs of men and women and that promote inclusive service delivery.

5. How Australia will deliver its support

AusAID is committed to delivering aid in support of economic and public sector reforms where there is a clear and logical evidence-base to support our investments and in areas where there is the greatest capacity for Australia to make a difference. The 2013 Review of AusAID's Economic and Public Sector Reform Program and the March 2013 Theory of Change workshop identified modalities through which AusAID can work best to achieve development results. These will be used to inform AusAID's EPSG medium-term program pipeline.

A key aspect of AusAID's activities in this sector will be increased cooperation and coordination with development partners. This will provide a mechanism for greater donor harmonisation and improved efficiency in the delivery of Australia's aid. AusAID is also committed to engaging routinely with the private sector (in particular with the Tonga Chamber of Commerce) and civil society as part of the design process for EPSG programs.

The following table outlines the proposed forward engagement for the EPSG bilateral program.

Table 2: Proposed forward engagement for EPSG bilateral program

Objective	Proposed activity	Proposed modality	Proposed partners
Public sector governance: GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the efficiency of public service delivery	Public service training programs and improvement of the public sector	Collaboration with donor partners; technical assistance and other forms of capacity development, including through funding donor partner programs	GoT (MoFNP, PSC), World Bank, ADB, PICPA
Economic and financial governance: GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the allocation and use of public expenditure for TSDF priorities as well as sustainable revenue collection	Advisory support to strengthen alignment between GoT expenditure and TSDF priorities; advisory support to MoR; upgrade to management	Budget support tied to achievement of actions identified in the Policy Reform Matrix; technical assistance;	GoT (MOFNP, MoR, Statistics, Audit Office), World Bank, ADB, PFTAC

	information systems & PC/trade systems; advisory support for MoFNP's Central Procurement Unit; advisory support for Audit Office.	funding donor partner programs
Business enabling environment: The majority of public enterprises reform and GoT agencies enable measureable development of the private sector	Support for SOE reform and private sector development through Policy Reform Matrix	Budget support tied to achievement of actions identified in the Policy Reform Matrix; regional AusAID programs (such as PSDI)	GoT, World Bank, ADB (PSDI)
Effective aid through alignment, harmonisation and mutual accountability: GoT agencies and development partners ensure a more coordinated whole of government approach to partnership for PFM reforms	Budget support tied to achievement of actions identified in the Policy Reform Matrix; policy dialogue between GoA and GoT	Performance-linked aid tied to Policy Reform Matrix; policy dialogue; funding of PF3 & PF4 facility with World Bank	GoT, World Bank, ADB
Political governance: Strengthened governance institutions that are transparent, accountable and responsive to citizens' needs and interests	Support to Parliament, civil society and Tonga Electoral Commission	Funding agreement with UNDP, AEC	GoT, UNDP, AEC

Outcome 1: Public sector governance

Support for public sector reforms

Australia will complement other donor efforts to support the GoT's public sector reform agenda with a view to improving the efficiency, transparency and accountability of public service delivery. In particular, AusAID will continue to maintain recent efforts to leverage the leadership of the World Bank in this sector. AusAID will ensure that activities undertaken are directly aligned with the TSDF (in particular, the enabling theme at 1.2.1⁵) and PFM Roadmap, and support achievement of the Policy Reform Matrix.

To date, Australia's support to public sector governance has been delivered primarily through an existing relationship and funding agreement with the PSC (including salary top-up for the position of Commissioner of the PSC). The 2013 review of AusAID's support in the sector raised a number of concerns with this modality, including: lengthy delays in providing acquittals for AusAID-funds; inefficient application and monitoring of the GoT's agreement management systems; and a high level of political involvement. As existing ACG agreements draw to an end, AusAID will look towards alternative modalities that are expected to provide greater efficiency in the delivery of Australian aid. This will include diverse approaches to capacity development including engaging with regional organisations such as the Pacific Island Centre for Public Administration (PICPA), which specialises in providing short-term advisory services and training packages aimed at strengthening public administration in Tonga. To date, the experience using PICPA has been relatively mixed with significant delays experienced in PICPA's establishment and a lack of adequate leadership (Director) and advisory capacity. However, it is expected that a new agreement beginning in July 2013, and continued refinement of the Centre, will allow PICPA to better support improvements in the quality and performance of the Tongan public service.

Outcome 2: Economic and financial governance

Australia will continue to support measures to improve expenditure quality through the provision of conditional and targeted budget support. The joint Policy Reform Matrix, which will be the cornerstone of the Economic and Public Sector Governance Program, has been working successfully in its current structure since 2011, with GoT meeting implementation targets for the last two years. It is envisaged that the Matrix will continue to provide a basis for budget support over the period of this Delivery Strategy in order to sustain the momentum of key public sector and economic reforms, and to provide further support for the GoT's fiscal consolidation program. This will be informed by the internal review of Pacific policy matrices. Ongoing efforts to rebuild Tonga's fiscal space to respond to shocks (building cash reserves and improving the efficiency of the public sector) will allow the GoT to mitigate risks associated with the uncertainty surrounding Tonga's external environment.

AusAID will ensure that activities under the EPSG program are aligned with, and support achievement of, actions identified in the joint Policy Reform Matrix. This will be achieved through: ongoing collaboration with the World Bank through the Pacific Facility 3 Trust Fund (and the successor PF4 facility); financial support to the ADB where appropriate, and; long-term advisory support. The Policy Reform Matrix is provided at Annex 4 along with details regarding the responsibilities for advancing each policy reform for 2014.

The Project and Aid Coordination Committee (PACC), overseen by the MoFNP's Aid and Project Management Division, has played a key role in coordinating and monitoring donor resources. AusAID will continue to support the division to ensure that donor resources are managed strategically and in alignment with GoT priorities.

Advisory support

Australia is committed to working through partner government systems in line with the commitments to aid effectiveness made at Paris, Accra and Busan. However, experience to date suggests that GoT processes to procure advisers require strengthening before AusAID can transition to full use of government systems. In the interim, AusAID will continue to ensure joint ownership of technical advisory support, including ensuring GoT involvement in selection processes and increased focus on performance management of advisers.

To date, the experience using PACTAM advisers in the EPSG program has been varied. The 2013 review of AusAID's economic and public sector reform program raised a number of issues that are addressed within this Delivery Strategy, including: lengthy recruitment processes; an inability for AusAID to effectively manage advisers (including responding to complaints); and questions around the sustainability of adviser outputs. In order to ensure efficiency and effectiveness in the delivery of Australian aid, AusAID will pursue a 'fit for purpose' approach to engaging technical advisory support. Where there is a need for specialised, short-term or critical advisory inputs (as for procurement), AusAID will draw resources directly from the AAS Standing Offer, with the benefit of significantly reduced recruitment times. It is envisaged that if managed right, PACTAM will continue to provide the most value for money to support long-term TA identified by the GoT in priority areas. A key to success will be ensuring that performance management arrangements are clearly identified and, where necessary, the managing contractor (or AusAID, where relevant) is able to play an active role in rectifying problems that may arise in the performance of services. In line with the recommendations of the 2012 independent review of PACTAM, AusAID will ensure closer engagement between PACTAM and Post so that TA is part of a coherent aid program. To ensure AusAID is able to manage advisers more effectively, we will hold quarterly informal meetings with advisers to discuss progress achieved to-date as well as any issues faced in the course of their work. Advisers will also be required to produce biannual reports on their work plan and outputs achieved.

AusAID will continue to provide either advisory or in-line support according to the needs and capacities of the relevant agencies. Requests for in-line and advisory personnel will be coordinated on an annual basis through the Aid Management Division of the MoFNP. In some cases, where capacity is significantly limited, AusAID may need to provide capacity supplementation until an adequate local counterpart can be engaged to fill the position. In other cases, where the input of a single TA may be unable to achieve a desired outcome, AusAID will consider the critical mass of advisory support needed to effect change, in order to ensure the sustainability of the work undertaken by advisers. All requests for personnel, particularly in-line personnel, will include a succession plan and a capacity building plan for GoT personnel. Terms of Reference will be jointly developed by the GoT and AusAID with specific outputs tied to EPSG end-of-program outcomes and aligned with Partnership objectives.

Revenue

In 2011, at the GoT's request, PFTAC undertook a Revenue Policy and Administration Review with a view to strengthening Tonga's revenue regime and improving revenue administration. The findings of this review have provided strategic direction for the MoR and have been used to inform the MoR's Corporate Plan. PFTAC is committed to working with the GoT and donors to further develop the implementation plan, the design and the deployment of the technical assistance necessary following this Review. AusAID will provide technical assistance to support PFTAC recommendations and will continue to seek greater oversight by PFTAC of the work of advisers in the field in a bid to further efforts towards greater donor harmonisation. This work will be supported by development and use of management information systems, such as the AusAID-funded Revenue Management System (RMS), to improve the ability of ministries to forecast cash flow and programming of cash disbursements. MoFNP and MoR staff will be supported to develop the knowledge and skills needed to operate and maintain these systems, and to work to improve the organisational environment for their effective use.

Procurement and audit

AusAID's 2013 procurement review noted significant weaknesses in the GoT's procurement system. AusAID is committed to implementing the recommendations of the review and supporting improved procurement business processes in line with the GoT's PFM Roadmap and the objectives of the Partnership for Development. This will require ongoing dialogue with the GoT to ensure a comprehensive Procurement Reform Action Plan is endorsed by Cabinet and included as a trigger for budget support in the Policy Reform Matrix. Inclusion in the Policy Reform Matrix will provide an opportunity for GoT to affirm its commitment to further procurement reform and will provide momentum to operationalise achievements made to date. In line with the recommendations of the procurement review, AusAID will provide ongoing technical assistance to the MoFNP's CPU (to support development of the GoT's procurement system). It is envisaged that long-term technical assistance will be provided through a complement of two International Procurement Specialists working in-line positions in the CPU for a minimum of two years.

In line with the PFM Roadmap, AusAID is committed to working with the GoT to develop activities that will strengthen audit capacity and promote a program of audit for GoT. Improving GoT audit practice will require capacity supplementation over the medium term to enable the Auditor General's Office to: complete annual audits of programs and ministries, departments and agencies on time; follow up the findings of its audits in an effective manner; and produce a timely annual report summarising the findings. AusAID will continue to provide support to strengthen Tonga's audit system through Pacific regional programs, including the Pacific Regional Audit Initiative.

Statistics

Australia will provide ongoing support to the Statistics Department with a view to generating more timely and accurate information for economic planning and monitoring. National statistics is considered an essential tool for measuring Tonga's economic progress and was identified as a key area for donor support at the Theory of Change workshop. It is also of vital importance to AusAID as the lack of up-to-date statistical data hampers our ability to target our programs effectively.

The 2013 review of AusAID's economic and public sector reform program noted considerable capacity constraints within the Statistics Department, including: a lack of staff in the department with the right mix of skills to undertake high-level statistical analysis; a lack of availability of counterpart staff, and; out-dated computer systems and software. During the Theory of Change workshop, staff from the department also acknowledged that the department was not currently in a position to effectively absorb technical assistance.

AusAID will undertake a more detailed assessment of the sector, including through discussions with relevant stakeholders such as the Tonga Chamber of Commerce and MoR/MoFNP, to identify priority needs and the range of options available for delivering Australia's aid in this sector. Should further technical assistance be considered, AusAID will assess the need for a package of support to ensure there is the critical mass required to effect change. AusAID may need to provide ongoing support to ensure that capacity building is sustained in the longer term.

In the interim, AusAID will support the upgrade of the Statistics Department's PC/trade system with a view to improving the macro-economic environment and fiscal management (as identified under the GoT's TSDF). This system is used extensively by government agencies, including the MoFNP and NRBT, for economic analysis and forecasting.

Outcome 3: Business enabling environment

Australia will support GoT efforts to implement a number of public enterprise reforms through the provision of conditional and targeted budget support tied to the Policy Reform Matrix. These include reforms aimed at restructuring inefficient SOEs and at improving compliance with the Public Enterprise Act. Successfully implementing these reforms will allow some public expenditure to be redirected to TSDF priorities whilst other savings will be used to reduce public debt.

Through the Policy Reform Matrix, Australia will also support actions to strengthen the private sector, including reducing the time and costs required to start a business, and creating a level playing field for private business through an appropriate competition policy. This work will be complemented by other Australian Aid programs including regional initiatives to stimulate trade (e.g. the Pacific Horticultural and Agricultural Market Access program). AusAID will also continue to provide support to the ADB's Private Sector Development Initiative, which aims to alleviate poverty in the Pacific region by promoting private sector-led growth.

Outcome 4: Effective aid through alignment, harmonisation and mutual accountability

Australia will continue to support and use the joint Policy Reform Matrix to drive harmonised support for on-going PFM and EPSG reforms identified in the PFM Roadmap and GoT agency Corporate Plans. This will avoid unnecessary duplication in the provision of technical assistance. As relationships mature, partnership principles will become more entrenched. True partnership and policy dialogue will be informed by a shared body of evidence for mutual accountability. The information for mutual accountability will come from strengthened EPSG monitoring systems (in MoFNP, MoR, PSC and the Audit Office) supported by data collection, analysis and reporting by the Statistics Department. In the context of providing greater mutual accountability, the GoT will be required to produce timely acquittals and reporting on the use of AusAID funds. AusAID will be required to ensure that budget forecasts, as well as pipeline plans and results, are communicated to the GoT in a timely and effective manner.

As partner agencies are ready to sustain change, Australia will support activities to improve the quality of monitoring information and how it is communicated to decision makers so that it is proactively used to sustain EPSG. This will include ensuring that complex PFM and statistical information are communicated more effectively to senior decision makers in the Legislative Assembly and Cabinet.

Political governance

In addition to delivering support for economic and public sector reforms, under the Partnership for Development Priority Outcome One, Australia will also provide assistance to improve Tonga's political and institutional environment. In 2013, AusAID initiated a four-year governance strengthening program in collaboration with the UNDP and Australian Electoral Commission (AEC). The program has been developed in line with AusAID's Effective Governance Thematic Strategy, seeking to strengthen governance institutions and democratic processes so that they are transparent, accountable and responsive to citizens' needs and interests. The program has three components: (i) support to Parliament to strengthen the capacity of Parliamentarians for improved law making, representation and oversight; (ii) support to civil society organisations to deliver advocacy relating to good governance; and (iii) support to the Tonga Electoral Commission to manage and oversee transparent free and fair national and district elections. Tonga's new political environment provides a unique opportunity to strengthen democratic processes and it is envisaged that this program will contribute to a more accountable, responsive and effective government. Through this Delivery Strategy, AusAID will work to ensure that political governance and economic and public sector governance reform programs are well aligned – particularly in relation to improving the links between policy advice from the public service to Ministers and increasing understanding of public financial management principles by MPs.

6. Strategy management

a. Managing and coordinating the strategy and portfolio

In 2012/13, funding in support of economic and public sector reforms accounted for approximately 52% of the Tonga Program. This is not expected to vary significantly over the period of the Delivery Strategy. Over the next four years, it is proposed that a total budget of $30 million, including: $6.5 million in TA and other capacity support programs, $3.5 million for a governance strengthening program; and $20 million in performance-linked aid, will be delivered under the Partnership for Development Priority Outcome One. Development of AusAID's future budget support program, provided in the form of performance-linked aid, will be informed by the results of the internal review of Pacific Policy Matrices. It is expected that budget support will remain constant at $5,000,000⁶ per year (conditional on the GoT implementing actions identified in the joint Policy Reform Matrix).

b. Transition planning from the existing program to the new program

Key activities for this Delivery Strategy, including the provision of performance-linked aid and collaboration with donor partners (such as through the World Bank PF3 facility), are already in place and will enable an easy transition to the new program.

⁶ In 2011-12 the GoT budgeted the equivalent of AUD2 million in budget support from Australia. The agreement with the GoT to use AUD5 million for salaries allowed the GoT to build up at least AUD3 million equivalent in cash reserves and thereby enhance budget execution and increase Tonga's resilience to possible future shocks to the economy which could reduce government revenue. This figure is anticipated to remain stable to support GoT's economic recovery and allow a degree of predictability for GoT budgeting purposes.

It is possible that AusAID will continue to receive ad hoc requests from the GoT. These requests will be processed through the MoFNP's PACC to ensure that they are managed strategically and in alignment with this Delivery Strategy (principles set out in Section 4.C). AusAID is prepared to refuse certain requests that are not aligned with GoT/AusAID priorities.

AusAID's program of support for an in-line adviser in the position of Head of Customs (Deputy Commissioner of Revenue) is due for completion in August 2013, after which the MoR will recruit for a local replacement. AusAID will assist in this transition by providing technical advisory support to the new Head of Customs for a period of six to twelve months.

A key change for the Tonga Program will be the consolidation of six initiatives in 2013 down to three (see Annex 9), in line with AusAID's Effective Aid report and the Comprehensive Aid Policy Framework (CAPF). This will reduce the fragmentation across the program and provide clearer alignment between EPSG activities and the joint Policy Reform Matrix. Both the Financial and Economic Management Program (ING000) and the Economic and Public Sector Management (INI190) initiatives were completed in June 2013. The Economic and Public Sector Reform II (INK375) and Tonga PACTAM (ING994) initiatives are due to be phased out in June and November 2014. The Economic and Public Sector Reform III (INK884) initiative will encompass all activities covered under the Partnership Priority Outcome One, with two exceptions. It is envisaged that Performance-Linked Aid will be easier to manage and monitor as a separate initiative (PLA; INK891) given the conditional nature of funding. The Tonga Governance Strengthening Program (INK890), which focuses on political governance, will also be maintained as a separate initiative given that it does not fall strictly within the scope of economic and public sector reform.

c. Resource implications

Implementation of this Delivery Strategy will be led by Tonga Post, with the assistance of a range of staff members in Canberra (desk and economists). AusAID will need to ensure that:

- Tonga Post has a sufficiently experienced Senior Program Manager and Program Manager, which can be supported by Canberra-based staff (including economists), with the time and resources to engage with GoT and other donor partners to:
 - conduct a readiness assessment of partner agencies before assigning long-term advisers;
 - jointly develop clear terms of reference with specific outputs for short-term and long-term advisers;
 - participate in final interviews of shortlisted candidates for long-term adviser positions;
 - plan, conduct, report and follow-up on findings from systematic monitoring visits to GoT partner agencies and their assigned long-term advisers (including reporting on adviser performance);
 - undertake day-to-day program management (including quality assurance processes).

AusAID will work to strengthen adviser performance management arrangements by scheduling quarterly informal meetings between AusAID (Senior Program Manager) and individual advisers to discuss progress on outputs and address any issues that may arise during the course of their work.

- Tonga Post has a First Secretary and sufficiently experienced Senior Program Manager, which can be supported by Canberra-based staff (including economists), with the time and resources to engage with GoT and other donor partners to:
 - plan, conduct and report findings from systematic monitoring visits and periodic evaluations with GoT partner agencies to establish a shared body of evidence;
 - use shared evidence to plan and conduct policy dialogue with GoT partners;
 - ensure performance-linked budget support drives effective progress towards GoT targets set out in the PFM Roadmap and TSDF priorities; and
 - ensure effective coordination between political governance and economic and public sector governance programs through quarterly team reviews.

The Tonga Program will draw on regular support from Canberra, including the Economics Advisory Group and Pacific Economic Adviser, for specific analytical work and to participate in budget support missions. The Tonga Desk in Canberra will provide a dedicated resource to manage PLA, conduct in-house monitoring, and lead on budget support missions. This role is expected to continue to be filled by the Desk-based economist.

d. Monitoring and evaluation

To date, AusAID's EPSR program has lacked an overarching monitoring and evaluation (M&E) framework to monitor the effectiveness of Australian assistance and the contribution it makes to the development of economic and public sector management in Tonga. Successful M&E requires processes and templates that provide enough information to ensure that AusAID is able to effectively track progress and evaluate effectiveness at the individual, activity and program level. As part of this Delivery Strategy, AusAID has developed a Performance Assessment Framework (PAF) which will enable AusAID to measure the collective impact of the program on the GoT's reform agenda and on the Partnership for Development. This is presented at Annex 1, along with high-level M&E questions to guide evaluation in the sector, and will be updated as the program develops. Indicators for the PAF are drawn from the Policy Reform Matrix, the GoT's TSDF, the PFM Roadmap, AusAID's Governance Section PAF and the Tonga Governance Strengthening Program. The PAF is consistent with the program logic agreed upon with government stakeholders at the March Theory of Change workshop.

More detailed performance measures, including an M&E framework, will be set out in initiative design and implementation arrangements. Implementation Schedules describing the aim, implementation plans, resources and management arrangements will be prepared in collaboration with the GoT and agreed to at annual Partnership talks. This will draw from the PAF and the EPSG M&E framework.

Proposed performance management arrangements

Performance management aims to monitor activities and outputs that demonstrate progress towards end-of-strategy outcomes and to evaluate contributions to outcomes and purpose. The proposed approach to performance management uses strategic indicators and performance questions implemented through four operational pillars to assess program performance. Monitoring and evaluation processes are aligned with GoT Corporate Plans and AusAID's Comprehensive Aid Policy Framework.

The four pillars are:

1. Pillar 1: Regular quantitative and qualitative management monitoring – This pillar is designed to align with monitoring conducted by GoT partner agencies under their Corporate Plans. Implementation partners (GoT, advisers, contractors and donor partners) will monitor the adequacy of progress towards annual plan and end-of-strategy targets (e.g. variance from planned inputs, activities and outputs) and monitor the quality of outputs (e.g. training or mentoring) on a regular basis. This will be reported back to AusAID at regular intervals determined and agreed upon by AusAID and the implementation partner at the design phase.
2. Pillar 2: Periodic evaluation of performance – AusAID will work with implementation partners to undertake biannual output-to-purpose reviews as well as rapid appraisal of contextual change in the sector (and GoT operating environment). These will inform AusAID and GoT biannual supervision missions.

The 2013 review of the EPSR program flagged the management of adviser performance as a key weakness with the existing program. AusAID will need to ensure that strong management arrangements are in place to avoid adviser issues posing an unnecessary burden on limited resources at Post. In order to address this issue, AusAID will request all adviser TORs include a requirement for advisers to report biannually on progress achieved to date. This will be complemented by quarterly informal discussions between AusAID (Senior Program Manager) and advisers as well as annual Adviser Performance Assessments.

3. Pillar 3: Scheduled AusAID and GoT supervision – evaluation questions will be used to guide joint AusAID and GoT scheduled biannual supervision missions to assess whole of strategy performance. This pillar also includes scheduled and ad hoc (e.g. case study) evaluations to assess performance at a whole-of-strategy level. As part of this performance arrangement pillar, AusAID will hold scheduled quarterly meetings with the GoT's Project and Aid Coordination Committee to ensure program coherence and oversight.
4. Pillar 4: Sense-making and communication – data from the above three pillars will be collated, synthesised, interpreted and analysed to provide feedback to GoT (especially agency CEOs), civil society and public sector stakeholders, when required. The analysis will be complemented by – and where possible benchmarked against – national data (e.g. data from the Statistics Department) and international PFM benchmarks (e.g. PEFA, ADB Regional Assessments and IMF Assessments). Communications will take into account the need for concise plain language; the information most relevant to inform different levels of the system (e.g. decision makers, service providers and citizen groups); and inclusion of diverse stakeholders including female and male public servants, citizens and their civil society groups, professional bodies and the private sector.

EPSG program reviews

A mid-term review of the program will be conducted in early 2015-16. This will provide an opportunity to review progress more broadly and assess whether any major changes in approach or outcome targets are required. A final review of this Delivery Strategy is expected to occur at the end of 2017.

e. Risk management

Key risks for development and implementation of activities under this Delivery Strategy are identified below and detailed at Annex 2. Treatments will be identified and managed through the full sector risk register, design processes and ongoing investment management practices in line with AusAID's Risk Management Framework and Policy.

Key risks for this Delivery Strategy are:

- A shock to Tonga's macroeconomic stability due to natural disasters, deterioration of global economic conditions, domestic policy, decrease in external assistance, etc. undermines cash management and disrupts service delivery;
- Backlog of delayed acquittals and return of funds from GoT due to poor financial system practices and capacity results in AusAID being unable to account for funds and ensure funds are used as agreed;
- Poor procurement practices due to lack of understanding of and capacity to implement processes results in AusAID being unable to ensure best value for money and could lead to corrupt practices
- Expenditure to priority areas is diverted due to poor planning (such as the impending loan repayments to China) resulting in delays and failure to achieve improvements;
- Achievement of governance strengthening program objectives is delayed or hindered by changes in the political environment (including elections in 2014); and
- UNDP institutional processes and procedures impact on governance strengthening program delivery and delay implementation of key activities.

AusAID will ensure that appropriate resources and skills are made available to ensure effective performance management of EPSG initiatives. This will be managed through the design process by allocating approximately 5% of operational investment to monitoring, evaluation, supervision and shared evidence for policy dialogue. The Tonga Economic and Public Sector Senior Program Manager will discuss risk management in quarterly meetings with relevant GoT ministries and in annual Evaluation Group Meetings for PACTAM and government counterparts, in addition to providing regular updates and dealing with issues as they arise. The economic and public sector program risk register will be updated quarterly.

Post will continue to engage with the MoFNP through the Policy Reform Matrix assessments led by the World Bank. The World Bank will monitor the GoT's budget closely and, through ongoing dialogue with the GoT, will help ensure that all donor budget support/sector budget support funds are being used for their intended purpose and that GoT's own funds are not diverted to unbudgeted/low priority activities. AusAID will participate in these biannual World Bank monitoring missions.

AusAID will draw on short-term technical assistance to provide intensive and regular monitoring of AusAID funds, including an annual sample audit of procurement transactions below TOP 3,000 (as identified in the procurement review). Given the complexity of needs in this sector, it is envisaged that the package of assistance outlined above will be provided through a contractual agreement with a specialist procurement firm under the current Aid Advisory Service (AAS) Standing Offer.

1.1 Objectives and outcomes

EPSP development objective to 2017	Tonga Australia Partnership for Development Outcome One: “A more efficient and effective public sector” This is aligned with the ‘Impact’ and ‘National Outcome’ identified in the GoT’s Strategic Development Framework: Impact: A just, equitable and progressive society in which the people of Tonga enjoy good health, peace, harmony and prosperity National outcome: A sustainable, efficient and effective public sector that develops and implements policies and programs to enable private sector growth and deliver quality public services in Tonga
End-of-strategy outcome to 2016/17	End-of-strategy outcome indicators	Intermediate outcomes (or outputs)	Intermediate outcome/output indicators	Key assumptions
End-of-strategy outcome one	Public sector governance
GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the efficiency of public service delivery	Percentage of planned reform activities implemented according to timetable; Percentage of reform plans adequately resourced (budgets and actual)	Progress towards developing sustainable human capacity building systems	Number of public servants trained; performance ratings for advisers on annual adviser performance assessments	Achievement in this area will be largely dependent on the ongoing commitment of GoT to undertaking public sector reforms.
Key evaluative questions for end-of-strategy outcome	What evidence is there that individual activities (including advisory support and other capacity development programs) are leading to public servants more effectively performing their roles? What are public servants doing differently as a result of training? How are improvements in public sector staff, plans, systems and processes leading to system-wide capacity development and reform?			<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Interview key stakeholders from GoT & AusAID • Consider context

End-of-strategy outcome two	Economic and financial governance
GoT agencies demonstrate measureable improvement in the allocation and use of public expenditure for TSDF priorities as well as sustainable revenue collection.	% actual recurrent expenditure allocated to TSDF public service delivery priorities	Improved expenditure management Key intermediate outcomes for economic and financial governance are identified in the Policy Reform Matrix.	Key reforms identified in the PFM Roadmap are progressed by MoFNP, MoR	Key intermediate outcomes will be determined through annual Policy Reform Matrix discussions between GoT and donor partners (finalisation of policy actions occurs in February and is led on behalf of donors by the World Bank).
	Number of criteria in periodic PEFA assessments for Tonga that obtain improved ratings	Improved public sector procurement practices	Procurement Reform Action Plan is endorsed by Cabinet by August 2013 and fully adhered to; all procurements are undertaken in line with GoT regulations and AusAID risk mitigation measures
		Strengthened GoT audit capacity	Timeliness of annual audits of programs/ministries/depts/agencies; evidence of follow up on audit recommendations
Key evaluative questions for end-of-strategy outcome	How much progress has been made by the GoT, with the support of donor partners, on implementing reforms identified in the PFM Roadmap and Policy Reform Matrix? How well-aligned have AusAID-funded activities been to the GoT Corporate Plans and PFM Roadmap? What evidence is there that reform plans are influencing government actions? What evidence is there that improvements in public sector management or financial management have led to better delivery of services? How effective have risk mitigation measures been to addressing key risks facing procurement for all AusAID-funded programs?			<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Review current budget papers, agency reports and Corporate Plans • Review IMF Article IV papers • Interview key stakeholders from GoT and civil society (e.g. chambers of commerce) • Compare results with Policy Reform Matrix, TSDF and PFM Roadmap • Participate in biannual World Bank policy Reform Matrix monitoring missions
